

IMLR Conference grant scheme 2022-23

Guidelines for applicants

About the Institute of Modern Languages Research

- 1 The Institute of Modern Languages Research (IMLR) is one of eight Institutes comprising the School of Advanced Study at the University of London. The IMLR supports, promotes, and facilitates research into languages, cultures, and societies. Though the Institute has established strengths in French, German, Italian, and Spanish, its work is increasingly focused on the study of language and culture in transnational perspective and the research that it supports is global in reach. The IMLR is home to the newly established Centre for Latin American and Caribbean Studies. The Institute enables researchers to engage in innovative research and to demonstrate research value to the wider public. It offers research degrees and is the leading national provider of doctoral training for Modern Languages. The IMLR, with its research centres, runs and contributes to national and international cross-disciplinary and cross-cultural research seminars, workshops, and conferences. The IMLR also hosts a thriving publications series, a conference support scheme, and a fellowships programme. It plays a leading role in debates that concern the shape of the disciplinary area and its engagement with issues of high topical concern.

About this Call for Applications

- 2 Applications are now sought for scholars at any level (early-career, mid-career, or senior scholars) to convene scholarly collaborations and academic events pertaining to Modern Languages and/or Latin American/Caribbean studies between 1 September 2022 and 30 June 2023, in institutions located in the UK, outside London. The deadline for applications is 11 April 2022.
- 3 The aim of this scheme is to support interdisciplinary research outside London and where institutional support structures may be limited. This scheme also aims to promote inter-institutional collaborations beyond one University, School, or department. The scheme is intended to support a conference that aims to bring together scholars from the wider region as participants or attendees.
- 4 It should be noted that doctoral students are not eligible to apply for funding under this event grant scheme. However, doctoral students may form part of a team of applicants where the co-ordinator of that team is post-doctoral.
- 5 Applicants can apply for a maximum of £2,000.

How to apply

- 6 There is no standard application form to be completed. However, the application must include the Budget Template, provided at the end of this document, and the proposal details listed below in item 7. The whole application should not exceed four pages.

- 7 The following elements must be included in submitted applications for the application to be considered:
- 7.1 The institution to whom the award will be made and details of organiser(s), convenor(s), and proposed speaker(s) including name, job title and institutional affiliation (CVs are not necessary). If possible, please include titles or themes of panels or papers to be presented;
  - 7.2 The title of the event, with a statement of the proposed topic and rationale for the event;
  - 7.3 A statement on the potential benefits the event will provide to Modern Languages and/or Latin American/Caribbean studies scholarship generally and to such studies in the geographical region;
  - 7.4 A statement on the anticipated audience of the proposed event, both in terms of numbers and composition;
  - 7.5 The expected dissemination or outreach of the proposed event;
  - 7.6 An indication of the timing (month/year) of your proposed event;
  - 7.7 The completed Budget Template (provided at the end of this document).

Selection Criteria

- 8 A Selection Panel of the Institute will assess applications in terms of their fit with each of the five following criteria:

Contribution to knowledge and scholarly interest

The extent to which the topic of the proposed event will advance current research, or make an original contribution to the field, or demonstrates original thinking or approaches outside conventional opinion or methodologies.

Academic feasibility

The extent to which the proposed event's subject coverage is broad enough to attract a significant audience but retains a clear focus; the feasibility of assembling the intended number of speakers/panels in the time available.

Interdisciplinarity and collaboration

The extent to which the proposed event is interdisciplinary and/or cross-language in its approach; the extent to which the proposed event seeks to engage a broad range of UK and international higher education institutions.

Scholarly legacy

The extent to which the event attempts to create lasting networks and collaborations to advance future research and scholarship, especially among postgraduates and Early Career Researchers; the extent to which the event will strengthen Modern Languages and/or Latin American/Caribbean studies research in the geographical region. Please note that participants should submit versions of their paper/presentations for inclusion in a publication wherever possible.

Value for Money

The extent to which the indicative budget of the proposed event demonstrates value for money; efforts made to leverage external sources of funding.

Budget

- 9 The budget for proposed events must be considered indicative at the application stage. If your event is selected, then staff from the IMLR will work with you to finalise the budget. The budget template is provided at the end of this document.

- 10 Where the IMLR is the only financial contributor to the event, any surplus which arises should be returned to the IMLR. Where IMLR contributes part of the income (excluding registration fees and commercial income e.g., publishers' stalls), the surplus should be returned to the participating institutions/organisations in proportion to the financial amounts contributed.

Eligible Costs

- 11 Eligible costs under this scheme include:

Cost item	Notes
Travel costs	For speakers/presenters, standard travel ticket costs are eligible, by air, train, coach, bus, private car <sup>1</sup> and, if unavoidable, taxi. Travel costs for those attending but not presenting are not eligible unless part of a competitively-awarded bursary for research students (see below).
Catering costs	For refreshment breaks. Lunch may be provided otherwise attendees should make own lunch arrangements.
Room hire/booking charges	Where unavoidable.
Subsistence for speakers/presenters	Reasonable subsistence for speakers or presenters may be claimed, commensurate to the duration of the journey to attend.
Travel bursaries for research students	These may be offered but must be competitively awarded and evidence of the competitive nature of the award must be retained.
Speakers' accommodation costs	At competitively-priced local hotel. A maximum of £100/night bed/breakfast.

Ineligible Costs

- 12 Ineligible costs include:
- Speakers' fees or honoraria (unless they are registered self-employed, translators, musicians, etc);
  - Excessive catering or subsistence costs;
  - Institutional overheads or contributions towards staff employment costs (whether academic or professional services staff).

Event Outputs

- 13 Successful applicants should display the IMLR's logo, and the Centre for Latin American and Caribbean Studies logo if appropriate, (both available upon request from the IMLR office) and acknowledge the IMLR's support on all publicity material. The IMLR requires the production of a report of proceedings of the event suitable to be circulated to stakeholder audiences. The report can be used as the basis of a post on the IMLR blog 'Living Languages' and may be published in the Journal of Romance Studies if relevant. Event organisers are encouraged to consider publishing the proceedings of the event in an edited volume or occasional paper where appropriate, either digitally or in hard copy, preferably using imlr books or the Journal of Romance Studies, where relevant.

Disbursement of grant funds

- 14 After the event has taken place, grantees must submit a narrative report together with a detailed financial report and accompanying receipts, by 11 July 2023 at the latest. The IMLR will then reimburse eligible costs, up to the value of the award.

Amendments to awarded grants due to Covid-19

- 15 If plans for the conference need to change due to Covid-19, then please submit details of this to the Institute Manager at the earliest opportunity. Full consideration will be given to format or content changes that may need to be made.

Application deadline

- 16 The deadline for applications is 11 April 2022. With regret, any application received after the deadline will not be considered. Informal enquiries and formal applications should be submitted by email to Cathy Collins, IMLR Manager (cathy.collins@sas.ac.uk). Applicants will receive the decision on their proposal before the end of May 2022. The event must be held between 1 September 2022 and 30 June 2023.
